

Mapping Inclusion, Prevention and Early Intervention

What's going on in terms of preventing offending in your local authority? Does your service provide early intervention support? How are you ensuring children at risk of negative outcomes are included?

CYCJ is a partner of the Inclusion as Prevention project, which is conducting a national scoping study into best practice in these areas of work across Scotland.

If you think you deliver or are aware of such approaches or services in your area or organisation, or want to know more about Inclusion as Prevention, please get in touch with Fern Gillon, Improvement Coordinator (fern.gillon@strath.ac.uk).

About Inclusion as Prevention

Funded by The National Lottery Community Fund, 'Inclusion as Prevention' seeks collaboratively to re-shape the design and delivery of preventative services with children and young people in South Lanarkshire who are at risk of offending, and their families. The Centre for Youth & Criminal Justice (CYCJ), Action for Children, South Lanarkshire Council and the Dartington Service Design Lab are working together to achieve this.

Through co-design and co-production, the project will re-design services by shifting from an acute and crisis driven approach when a young person becomes involved in offending, to identify and intervene at an earlier point in their lives when they are at risk of becoming involved in future offending or other negative outcomes, tackling the root causes of this behaviour.

CYCJ is primarily funded by the Scottish Government and hosted by the University of Strathclyde.
